Manners and Culture

Q: Why are American people so quiet all of the time?

A: Depends on your perspective. For people from some cultures, such as the Latino or Arab cultures, we are relatively quiet. For people from other cultures, such as Chinese, Japanese, or Korean, we talk quite a bit.

Q: Should I say, "Excuse me" or "Pardon me" if people are blocking my way?

A: Both are perfectly acceptable.

Q: When someone invites you to an American house what is the best way to be polite with the hosts?

A: By showing up on time. Also, you may bring a small gift, such as chocolate, flowers, or (if you know your hosts drink) wine. This part is not required, however. It's appreciated, but not expected.

Q: Can you tell me how to greet people in a group of different ages in the US?

A: "Hi."

We don't make age distinctions in English the way that some languages do.

Grammar

Q: What is the difference between “ought to”, “should”, and “must”?

A: There is no difference in meaning between “ought to” and “should” in a positive statement. “Ought to” isn’t used much in negative statements or questions, and it’s not used in formal writing. Both of them mean that something is advisable, but you have a choice. “Must” means that you don’t have a choice.

Q: Which is grammatically correct: “Don’t you have some snacks?” or “Do you not have some snacks?”

A: Neither one. In both cases, you can, however, replace “some” with “any”. Then, they’re both correct.
