Manners & Culture

Q: What are some common ways to greet people in the U.S.?

- Many Americans greet by saying “Hi” or “How are you?” This is usually a form of greeting rather than an actual questions about your wellbeing. The common response is “I’m good, thanks. How are you?”
 - You might greet your teacher in a slightly more formal way. You can say, “Good morning” or “Good afternoon.”
 - It is common to smile during greetings. Americans generally smile a lot and are likely to appreciate a smile in return.
 - A handshake is the most common greeting when meeting someone for the first time or in professional settings.
 - Handshakes should be firm and accompanied with direct eye contact. However, be aware handshaking can seem too formal and awkward in casual settings.
 - Many people also hug to greet close friends and family that they haven’t seen in a while.

Joke of the Week
